COMMENTS

Costs of publication went up so radically last year that it is imperative that I recommend that any future editorial staff should certainly reject (repeat, reject) any paper over ten pages of double-spaced, properly margined typescript, or that the number of papers be reduced from, say, from fifteen to ten.

Also, we should realize that the free ride is over. Unless we raise dues, each of the colleges or universities participating in this conference will have to pay a pro rata share of the cost. Last year, with the help of Professor Alvin Keaton, President Gerald Thomas of New Mexico State University gave the New Mexico-West Texas Philosophical Society approximately one half of the funds for the publication of the issue of the Proceedings that you now have in hand. In the future each institution will have to contribute if this publication continues.
